laceration of the flesh heals "by first intention." This is true because nature has provided a constituent to the circulation known as Plasma, which joins and holds the place together until the fibres and tissues can permanently knit and interweave. Whenever the ulcer becomes chronic it is because this healing quality of the blood has been impaired by some impurity in the circulation, and the place remains open, infecting all surrounding flesh, until the character of the circulation is changed. No sore can heal where the blood is bad; be-cause the morbid impurities on which it thrives are constantly deposited into it by the burdened circulation. Cleanse the blood and the sore will heal of its own accord, because then its very source and foundation will have been destroyed. feat stared them in the face marred much of their play.

Of the two teams' play, I noticed several things that showed the Athletics superiority. One was in stealing bases where the Athletics showed much more class. I noticed particularly that the American Leaguers took a much better lead from first base than the Cubs Another was the Athletics' clock-like fielding game, which outclassed the Nationals, by pulling off several fast double plays in the pinches, the places they count the most. To complete the comparison. I must repeat something of the battling, the point I made when I said they would win. At the bat the Athletics were human demons, cracking away with wloked slashes, and sending the ball by terrific drives to every corner of the field from any one of the Cub's pitchers. On the other hand, the Cubs failed to solve the wonderful curves and fast balk of Bender and Coombs. No little credit can be given to Thomas for catching three of the winning games, his work in the first and second contests showing conclusively his mastery over the Cubs' base runners, and forcing them to give up entirely this one style of attack, Then Lapp showed that Thomas work was not an Athletic fash in the pan, by nipping several of the Cubs in their attempts to steal in the lifth and deciding contest.

attempts to steal in the lifth and desciding contest.

It settles the one great question of whether the American League can boast of as good catchers as the Navitonal. And this series decided it for good and all—that is, that we in the rival alreuit are just as strong as the Nationals.

I wish to say of the Cubs that Tinker's, Schulte's and Archer's work on the offensive was good. Manager Chance and Zimmerman *lso hit to advantage. Of the fielding, each infielder was good and bad in spots. Of the pitchers, Brown, Pflester and McIntyre pitched the classiest ball. Cole lived up to his reputation by being salled a lucky pitcher, and held the Atletice safe in run getting, but was hit hard and seemed to be fortunate in getting out of several bad holes. He must be given due credit for this.

Zimmerman was placed in a bad position in this series, as he realized that he had an almost perfect pattern to follow by filling the shoos of the great little second baseman, Johnn Evers.

AMUSEMENTS:

Why so famous a play as "Arsen-Lupin," with William Courtenay and a supporting company almost identica with that which assisted in giving the play such a run in New York, should have drawn so small a house as that at the Academy of Music last night is beyond the comprehension of those who take an interest in things theatri-cal, and is a little humiliating to those of us who have been howling because we never have a chance to "see any-thing good." "Arsene Lupin" is one so cal, and is a little humiliating to those of us who have been howling because we never have a chance to "see anything good." "Arsene Lupin" is one of the few emphatic successes of the last few years, William Courtenay is one of the best known and one of the very best of the younger men of our stage, and yet the house was not half-filled.

The piece itself, after all is said, is a sort of glorisied melodrama, but it is "a drawing room play" at that. There are no mechanical effects, except one, and its success depends almost entirely upon the clean-cut skill and art of the actors, and in particular upon the ability of the man playing the title role, cleverly as the lines read and ingeniously as the situations are created.

There will be performances to-night and to-morrow afternoon and night, so that it is hardly necessary to relate the story, except to say that the theme is, to some little extent, that of "A Social Highwayman," and more nearly that of "Raffles." But it is Gallicized. Raffles was a melancholy knave, great thief as he was—perhaps because he was a gentleman in the beginning. Arsene Lupin is gay and debonair, sudacious and winning, fearing nothing, and "bluffing" a whole gang of policemen with a bomb which was really a rubber bail—perhaps because he was anonly became Duke of Charmerace after the manner of the claimant in the Ticheborne case. But surprises follow one another so fast that even the hardened theatregoer is taken off his feet time and again. The very audacity of Lupin, his marvelous resourcefulness, his bravura sityle of dealing with the sleuths on his trait, make the house sit up and gasp, and, grand rascal that he is, the house is "with him"—to a woman—and to a man, too, to be fair about it.

And what a Lupin William Courtenay makes! Slender, unusually good-

ner by Sidney Herbert. Charles Har-bury, as M. Gournay-Martin, and Ar-thur Ellott, as the examining magis-trate, had comedy roles, and made the very most of them, while a num-ber of smaller parts were admirably played.

ber of smaller parts were aumiranty played.

The settings were just about per-fect—a big clock on the wall actually ran, and when the bell struck twelve at a tense moment, the hands showed twelve—a trlumph of "timing."

Worth seeing more than once.

St. Elmo at Bijou.

Vaughan Glaser's production of Williard Holcomb's dramatization of Augusta Evans Wilson's widely-read novel. "St. Elmo." opened at the Bijou last night and was well received by a capacity house. The engagement continues through the week.

Unlike most book plays. "St. Elmo" preserves in a really remarkable degree the atmosphere and even the language of the original story; moréover, the characters are drawn true to the period in which they are supposed to have lived. Another fact which tends to make the present version especially interesting is that the author has reproduced within the space of four asis all of the strongest episodes of the book. The curtain ascends on the old blacksmith shop of Aaron Hunt, amid an enchanting woodland setting, reproducing a poetic conception of "The Village Blacksmith." Incidental to this act, in which all of the main characters of the play are introduced, is the duel of St. Elmo and Murray Hunmond, the killing of the latter. Edna's act in saving St. Elmo by misdirecting the sheriff and the death of Aaron Hunt.

Each Loser Receives Check for $1,315

Chicago, Ill., October 24.—The only consolation Manager Chance and his players of the local National League team got out of the world's series was in the division of the receipts, which took place this afternoon. Each of the players carried away a check for $1,315. Secretary Williams and Trainer Simons were voted in for full shares of the "melon." A fine of $50, assessed against Chance for disputing a decision, was found to have been added to his expulsion from the grounds during Thursday's game. This was paid from the loser's share before the "split up" of the money.

ane man's character under the in-fluence of his growing love for Edna Earl, as disclosed by the pen of Mrs. Wilson, is a task to tax the ability of the best of actors, no matter how fine his art, or how subtle his methods. It is, therefore, safe to assume that the St. Elmo of Martin L. Alsop in the present production is more satisfactory to those who have not read the book than to those who have. This is not meant to be finding fault, however, Mr. Alsop plays the part with fine in-Mr. Alsop plays the part with fine intelligence and superior ability, and succeeds in making it convincing despite its multifold intricacies. From her first appearance as a barefooted child in the onening act until the close of the play. Beatrice Worth is excellent as Edna Earl, her portrayal of the difficult role being finished in every particular. The supporting company, with minor exceptions, is good, and with the excellent scenic equipment, helps to make the present production, the star attraction of the present season at the Bliou.
